Twin sisters, medical doctors and co-founders of Medlikeme.com

As seen on "NBC Nightly News," these twin sisters and medical doctors broke barriers throughout their youth and early adulthood, graduating as salutatorians from their high school and earning scholarships to Cornell University. They both decided to attend medical school, and although it was a challenging road, they succeeded. Now through their free online community, Medlikeme.com, they seek to support and inspire others who are traditionally underrepresented in health care professions.

Spanish interpretation will be available.
